Software packages are very powerful today. In fact they sometimes are too powerful, too complex and there are too many of them. Let's count what the average small business needs to have to run it's daily operations:

- :: accounting software
- :: word processor
- :: spreadsheet
- :: e-mail
- :: time tracking
- :: payroll
- :: project management
- :: scheduling
- :: estimating

If your business is well organized you may already have CRM (Customer Relationship Management) or SFA (Sales Force Automation) in addition to the above. But adding more software makes navigation even more complicated. As a business owner or office manager you need to pull information from all of those sources to get an accurate view of what is going on. And you know that this is not an easy task.

Our idea is quite simple. We developed the software that allows you to keep information related to your business in one place. We do not replace anything - you still will need an accounting software and a word processor and a spreadsheet application. But our software keeps important information in one place and because of it you can see how one thing relates to another.

epesi BIM is modular and built upon a framework that we released as an open source. We constantly develop new modules for specific business needs. The basic version is also free - released as an open source and includes:

:: address book

:: calendar

:: tasks

:: phone calls

:: notes and documents
